Speaker for March 17th, 2024

- Patricia Rose -

- Flying Stars and the 9 Period -

In this talk Patricia will introduce this specific branch of feng shui that considers space, time and objects in harmonising homes and spaces. Flying Stars Feng Shui is based on the Chinese Solar year or Hsia (Farmer's) calendar.

On 4th February 2024 we moved into Period 9, a new 20 year period in Flying Stars Feng Shui. Period 9 is the 9th twenty-year cycle of the Lower Yuan from 2024 to 2043.

Numbers are flying stars and within Period 9, the number 9 is auspicious. We will unpack the lucky 9 in relation to activating stars, the five elements and building understandings of how to minimise inauspicious energies. The number 9 is of the fire element which can be characterised by volatility, rapid changes and possible increases in cyber fraud. You will see links between Chinese Astrology and Chinese Medicine as fire symbolises the heart and eyes, and our constant pressure to complete things quickly can put a strain on our hearts.

Patricia has been conducting Flying Star readings for friends for over 5 years. This is an interactive session and will involve dowsing so please bring a pendulum. Patricia Rose has a PhD in Education and has taught for over 30 years in primary schools and two universities. She has been on a journey of self development and healing for over 25 years and has completed an Angel Intuitive Course, NLP Accreditation, a Certificate IV in Telephone Counselling and a Certificate IV in Flying Stars Feng Shui.

From the Editor

Our March meeting will start with our yearly AGM. This will be followed by our normal talk which promises to be very interesting.

We all have, as dowsers, personal stories that may inspire others or point to some learning that we have received by way of the pendulum. We all would love to hear them. If you feel that they are appropriate, please send them to me (a word document is fine), so I can share them with all our members. Your name need not be published if you do not want to.

Please email me and attach the document to the email, my email address is on page 27. Take John Richardson, for example, he does send me interesting little articles. I am sure other members can do the same, grab a pen and paper and go for it. I look forward to reading your articles.

Our committee has been working hard this year to provide interesting speakers for the meetings, and learning environments. We now have 2 seminars planned for this year. They are listed on our website at www.dowsingaustralia.com/seminars, where you can download the information and registration pages. They will also be available at the meetings. Do not miss out on the chance to learn more and enhance your dowsing skills.

If you would like to help and participate, please feel free to contact one of our committee members (details on page 27) and let them know. We always need help, and it is a good feeling to contribute some of your time or energy to a good cause.

We have a range of articles this month with a lot of information. I always love to hear from Alanna, and be reminded of the power of blessings and the need to make the most of my time, not by doing more, but by taking the time to appreciate what I already have.

Until next time,

François

There Be Dragons!

Relocating Earth energy flows and their Dragons

By Alanna Moore

In Irish folklore we are warned not to build over or disturb the Fairy Pathways that criss-cross the landscape. These currents of earth energy, acknowledged as the by-ways of fairies and other devic beings, are likewise found the world over.

The Chinese associate their own Lung Mei / Dragon Lines with actual dragon spirits, and this I also find to be so.

These telluric currents rise up from beneath the ground as a dowsable upward Earth vortex. They then flow along the land surface in serpentine, toroidal flow paths, to eventually descend below again via a downward vortex. Sometimes the geo-vortices connect via vertical energy columns into the sky energy network. Geo-vortices also act as doorways, portals for inter-dimensional traffic.

Protective guardian spirits can often be found residing in a geo-vortex. Their appearance, seen clairvoyantly, depends on local lore. Dragons, I've found, are fairly common and indeed - universal. I've detected dragon spirits across the globe, from around the sacred springs of Malvern, UK, to Malaysia; and in Australia, where Aboriginal people know them as Rainbow Serpents. Such all-important serpent spirits can look quite dragon-like in Aboriginal art work, while classic Chinese dragons are often depicted in serpentine forms.

In Chinese feng shui one should never tread on the dragon's tail, as they say, and Dragon Lines demand great care. But space is at a premium these days and many a dragon's tail gets trampled.

I always try to avoid disturbing these powerful Earth forces in any way, but when I've found them within people's homes I've had to do something about it. It isn't good to have a dragon in the home! Following are stories of some interactions with geo-vortices, Dragon Lines and their associated spirits.

Dragon One

After a long day of dowsing for clients in Malaysia, I found, by map dowsing, a couple of vortices that were inside homes and so warned the people about this. Luckily on my last day there I had a chance to go and help them out, but I also had a night flight home to catch, so there wasn't much time.

Being close to the equator makes for a challenging climate to visit. Now the atmosphere was getting pretty tense. A thunderstorm was brewing as we headed out to the edge of Kuala Lumpur, and it got to 37°C and very humid. We passed through a village of Orang Asli (indigenous people) and finally stopped at K.'s home, nicely located beside a forest valley, the special home place reserved for the Orang Asli.

K. had planted fruit trees along the road verges around the house and from one, a huge green Jackfruit (or Durian) was picked for us to eat. (This is the infamous bad-smelling fruit that is not allowed to be taken into hotel rooms for its odour!)

Dowsing K.'s home office, the strong vortex point found by map dowsing was there alright. It turned out to be very much a 'chaos spot', where K.'s daughter, I was told, would occasionally have ferocious temper tantrums! I tuned my inner eye down into the vortex and saw below the ground a colourful dragon that was peering up at me, with some astonishment! I had not had the chance to warn it of our plan. I prefer to take more time and give the devas prior warning, but I didn't have the luxury of time. So now I took things very slowly and summoned up extra powers of persuasion! Silently I explained to the dragon that in here was not a good place to live, and that I needed to help move it out to a lovely new spot, outside in the garden, where it would be safe and sound, and not troubling the humans.

I had divined a new spot already and dug a little hole where some of K's crystals, deemed suitable by dowsing, were placed.

Finally the idea sank in and was accepted, so I began to slowly 'herd' the vortex, and dragon with it, in the direction it needed to go. I held one of K's crystals in my hand to help it to connect to me and anchor its energy. Slowly pushing them along, I had to constantly reassure the dragon that all would be well.

So far, so good. But as we neared the window there was a hiccup. It stopped moving and rebelled! "I can't move, I can't!" it screamed at me and I could see its tail thrashing to and fro in frustration. "Yes, you can, you can!!" I kept telling it, sending love and reassurance. "No, I can't!"

A few tense minutes passed and finally my 'dragon whispering' worked. The tail stopped thrashing around. Phew!! We could continue onwards, ever-so-slowly, and finally made it to the window.

I dashed to the outside of the window and continued. This time I pulled the dragon and vortex energy out into the garden, walking tiny footsteps, one at a time, slowly towards the new spot. If I went too fast, I'd get the message to slow down. Eventually we made it to the spot beside the little pond. We placed more crystals in the hole and I dowsed over it to reinforce the desired outcome.

I advised K. to make a small stone circle around the new vortex location, to help hold the energies there and keep the dragon happy.

Indeed, the dragon seemed happy enough to stay put and there was now no energetic trace of anything back in the room. All was good, so off we sped down the highway to the second dragon, as storm clouds darkened and rumbled loudly above.

Dragon Two

The second house was in a newish, upmarket housing estate. The large geo-vortex was located at the base of the staircase to the upper floors. Interestingly, the woman of the house, who greeted us on crutches, had fallen down these stairs at New Years Eve, not long before. “That vortex might have had something to do with your fall,” I suggested. Whatever the case, there was too much disruptive energy for anyone's lounge room.

Tuning in clairvoyantly I again saw a dragon stationed in the centre of the vortex, of the same 'species' as the other. It was mainly white with touches of blue colour. Fortunately it wasn't as grumpy as the last one. My friend Alice also (independently) saw its misty, mainly white form swirling around. I went through the same procedure as last time, there were no hiccups and all went well.

The dragon's new home was in a bare patch of new garden, and I advised that a small stone circle might be put there. A little Spirit House wouldn't go astray either. These are commonly seen in the yards of Asian people, who pay their respects daily to the land and air spirits, with one Spirit House on the ground for earth beings, and one higher up for the air beings.

As we headed back to Alice's place the black clouds finally burst, lightning blazed and torrential rain pelted down as we sped down the highway, with driving visibility difficult. But at least the temperature had mercifully dropped by ten degrees. “Hmmm, the blessing of rain,” I thought. It was a good sign. And, despite the smell, the Jackfruit tasted delicious!

Dragon Three

The following story is from Victoria, Australia, from December 2015. The client sent the following initial email queries, she wrote:

Hi Alanna,

You may remember that we purchased 50 acres just over a year ago [2014], which came with a partially built brick house. The previous owners started building it 25 years before, and after many incarnations, changing plans, pulling bits down and then building again, changing plans again, they gave up and it has ended up just as a brick shell and stumps. We always assumed it was financial (no - we found out they had plenty of money). Then we put it down to their procrastination...

At the time of purchase, apart from feeling positive about buying it, I did dowse to find out whether it was the correct property for us, with a huge 'Yes' swing. Prior to buying, we wrote a list of all our wants and requirements in the perfect property and then sent it out into the universe. We couldn't believe how perfectly accurate this place was!!

We took up finishing the build of the house, but we also came to a halt. It wasn't until we started to build, that things started going wrong. For example, we dug up an underground electrical cable that was not as deep as it should have been. The same day, our dog was bitten by a tiger snake.

And it seemed that every time we started something, we were held up for different reasons.

Then, I did the dowsing workshop with you at Pete's. It still didn't click, until we did the segment where we dowsed the maps of other people's properties. Karen dowsed my property and said she had dowsed a Dragon Line running right through the middle of our house. What did Alanna say???? NEVER build on a Dragon Line!!!

After the workshop, I went home and did indeed find the serpent [dragon] line running right through the middle of the length of the house. Ugh! Sigh! ...

When I got home, I sat down with the dragon line and did a meditation. I felt its very strong, old, male energy. I attempted to compromise with him, however, he just did not want to communicate and did not want disturbance of any kind. The word he projected to me was 'Stagnant'.

I didn't think he was angry, more annoyed. He just wanted to be left in peace without all that work going on, and so, everything just stops. Well, at least there is an explanation as to why it was never finished! I did explain why we were there, and what we were intending to do, and the hope that we can work in harmony together, but I'm not sure that he was very empathetic. I just kept hearing the word 'stagnant'. Ahhh!! What do I do now!??

That's when I contacted you and sent the plan of the property. Did you say that a serpent line cannot be moved, except maybe to go down and pop up further along? The trouble is that we can't move the house either. We do, however, have a wonderful position 30 metres down for the serpent line if it is possible to move it.

We were hoping you may have some advice for us, and in the meantime, we have stopped work so as not to annoy him,” “Aha! There's a reason for everything!” I replied. “Luckily it is possible to negotiate with a serpent!” And so, I went back to the map and started to remotely connect to the dragon/serpent spirit and energy line, and explain what was required, with due respect! Could it please dip down and avoid going through the house please?

Eventually the desired result was divined to have occurred, by map dowsing. Not being there to double check, I asked V. to do onsite dowsing.

I wrote to her:

“I asked the Dragon Line to go underground at a downward vortex (marked on the map) and to come out again well past the house, in what would dowse as an upward vortex.

Perhaps when you go there next you'll find it's still there, but it's actually under the ground, beneath the house, rather than on the surface. And it was very happy for things to get sorted too!”

Christmas came and went and I heard nothing back. But no news is usually good news. And so this was the case.

I asked V. again if the dragon line did actually dive under the house and she replied:

"Yes!! Thank you! The serpent line is of course still there, however, I have been able to dowse the downward and upward vortices.

The house site feels different too...hard to describe...it feels like the tension is gone, much freer. Also, it was always hard to picture the finished home, but now all the ideas are flowing. Thanks so much, we are very happy with the results!”

Update a few years later, I returned to Victoria in late 2019 and was at ‘Pete the Permie’s’ Telopea Gardens teaching dowsing again in the beautiful Dandenong Ranges near Melbourne. I heard talk in the class of the wonderful things about V.'s place. Pete told me that they have finished the house now - it is amazing - and their new cafe has opened alongside Keith's Nursery too.

So, I later asked V. for an update and she told me how things had unfolded:

“The difference in the energy was amazing! You could feel the release, ease...hard to explain...clear, free, flow, peace. We started the serious building after we moved here in June 2018, and we finished the house and were living in it by 21st December 2018! Building a house in that time frame is ridiculously fast. It was the ease of flow through council planning and sourcing materials and trades people that was mind blowing.

We have also started a business here (part of our dream). Yarrowood Nursery, Cafe & Farm Shop (if you are on Facebook, you can check it out). Keith loves to grow plants and I love to bake, so it's a perfect combo.

The Cafe has a cottage and veggie/herb garden, in which I have worked in collaboration with our garden Deva, and I dowsed for every plant, asked where it would like to be planted. Many of the customers comment on the beautiful energy our garden and farm has - and we haven't even placed our ‘Tower of Power’ as yet.

In regard to our home, everyone that stays, says that it has a beautiful calm, relaxing feel and they love to visit, so, thank you again Alanna!”

Author Alanna Moore has been a dowser for over 40 years. She was one of the founding members of our society in 1984. She has written several books on dowsing. She will attend and present at our 40th Anniversary celebration in November. She also often also hold seminars and training session. We will let our members know the details when they become available.

How Not to Meet a Well Driller

By Jim Kuebelbeck

Beside my work as a water dowser, I've experienced many other interesting things in my life. Somewhere along the way, I happened to acquire a commercial pilot's license. I once suggested to my wife, Carol, that she take a few flying lessons, just so she'd be able to safely land the aircraft and walk away from it alive if I should suddenly drop dead in flight.

Big mistake.

After a few lessons, she got hooked and continued to go on to get her private pilot's license. How well I remember when our daughters came home after flying with her, telling me it was much more fun flying with her, because she did more chandelles than I did when they flew with me (an intricate aircraft manoeuvre where the pilot combines a 180-degree turn with a climb; it's now a required skill for attaining a commercial flight certificate in many countries).

The manoeuvre is much like making a figure eight in the sky, and it requires more than a bit of piloting skill. Some years ago, I was scheduled to go on an extended cross-country flight. It was mid March, and much of the winter's snow was already melting in most areas. I called the airport the evening before to make sure the plane was ready to go.

I was told the aircraft was just coming out of a major engine overhaul but would be ready to go in the morning. I told the airport operator I wanted them to give it a test flight before I took it up, and he said they'd do it early the next morning. Later that same evening, he called me back and asked if I'd do him a favour by flying out to an airport in North Dakota, leaving the plane there (for them to use for their flight training), then fly one of their planes back for a scheduled maintenance check. I told him I would.

During the night, however, a severe thunderstorm came through the area. It lasted until early morning, and I considered rescheduling. But the weather forecast said the front would soon move through and clear skies were forecast for later. It was still raining a bit when I got to the airport. So, I filed my flight plan and had a cup of coffee.

Two other pilots were talking in the airport lounge and asked where I was going. When I told them I was heading west, they told me they'd just come from the Dakotas flying a U.S. mail plane, and that the turbulence was so bad they had to get out of the sky until it passed. They asked what I was flying, and I told them it was the aircraft parked right next to their government plane. "Maybe you want to ask a few questions before you take that plane out," one of them said. "Somebody just took it out for a test flight, and when he came back, we overheard him talking to a mechanic about how the engine lost some power when he put on carb heat.

But the mechanic said the engine had just been overhauled and losing power under carb heat was normal after an engine overhaul". I thanked them for the info and went to the hanger to ask the mechanic about it. I got the same story from him. He told me everything had been checked out, and that the plane was good to go. I could see skies clearing to the west, and it looked like it was going to be a great day for flying. I pre-flighted the aircraft and got off the ground and headed west. It was a warm spring day, and I could only see a few patches of snow here and there.

I levelled off at 5,000 feet, got the aeroplane trimmed up and settled back to enjoy the scenery. Or so I thought. I flew along for about a half hour. Then, I noticed I lost a couple hundred feet of altitude. Thinking I might not have tightened up the throttle control lock, and that it might've had eased back, I loosened it up and tweaked up the throttle a bit. I regained my altitude and flew on for another five minutes. Then I noticed another slight drop in RPM. Thinking I was probably picking up a little carburettor ice, I reached over and engaged the ‘carb heat’ control.

In about five seconds, the whole plane shuddered, the engine RPM went down to zero, and I’m suddenly looking at a stopped propeller. Things got very quiet up there. The only sound I heard was that of the wind rushing past the outside air vents. That’s not a very pleasant sound when you’re used to having the noise of a big engine turning a big propeller. I looked around for a place to make an emergency landing if I had to put it down. But all I could see were miles and miles of woods ahead of me. I knew I had to keep up my air speed or the laws of aerodynamics would soon get my undivided attention. So, I pushed the nose toward the ground and made a slow descending turn to see what was behind me.

A couple miles back, I could see what looked like a small open pasture. With luck, I thought I might be able to make it. So, I primed the carburettor once more and tried to restart the engine. But, I was now flying a glider (the only difference being that my glider had a big, heavy engine up front trying to obey the laws of gravity). I remember saying out loud, “Okay God, it’s just you and me now, and you’d better be one hell of a copilot.” I made it to the small open area and tried to head into what little headwind there was. I raised the nose a bit, manually engaged full flaps and slowed up as much as I dared.

I was about 100 feet off the ground when, to my horror, I saw a herd of beef cattle right where I was trying to land in about three seconds. I touched the rudder and just missed hitting two cows. The rumble of the noise when the nose gear sheared off was almost pleasant to hear, because I realized I wasn’t dead. But, I think I was out of that aircraft even before it came to a complete stop. I looked around and spotted a farmhouse with a big shed in the distance, and I headed for it. When I got up to the farmyard, I heard some noise coming from the shed.

When I entered the shed, I was quite surprised to find a well driller doing some repair work on his drilling rig. This would certainly not be my recommended way for a water dowser to meet a well driller. The airport operator called me some time later to thank me for saving the aeroplane. I didn't tell him it wasn't the aeroplane I was trying to save. I asked how they were going to get the plane out of that little pasture. He told me they'd gone up and checked everything out.

I told him there was no way they were going to fly it out of that tiny pasture even if they had a tarred runway. "I know," he said. "But we did a little looking around out there, and talked to a few farmers along the nearest country road, and if we can get the plane hauled out to this gravel road, we think we can fly it out of there."

We'll have to cut down a few telephone poles along the road. But we have an Alaskan bush pilot here who looked the situation over and says he can do it, if we can get any deer or animals off the road. He told us he'd have that thing screaming down that road, and have that plane back up in the air."

I wished him luck and told him to let me know when they were going to try this particular stunt because I wouldn't mind being there to witness it. "Well, here's the deal," he said. "We'd like to keep this whole incident as low-key as much as possible. We'll probably try to fly it out of there early some morning. But right now, we don't know just when we'll be able to do this." He called about a week later to tell me the plane had just gotten back, safe and sound.

Who Is in This Healing?

By John Richardson, one of our members from the NSW North Coast

Healing energy can be used by running energy onto the body with your hands. It can also work at a distance, with the same intent, to effect change in a person.

In the case where a healing involves you and multiple people who are in conflict, including detrimental spirits and non-beneficial earth energies; you want to heal the situation, but you lack the experience and knowledge to effect the change required.

The solution is to call on other people (past or present) that may have the talent required and be willing to help you. If so, and you, as a dowser, can utilise their talents remotely!

To use that remote help, go into your dowsing mode with your tool of choice, whatever works for you, call on all persons involved in the conflict, including their spirits, and the talented people (past or present) you want to get help from, and explain the situation that you want resolved. Make sure for participants and spirits to be in accord to effect change.

In my case, when I am one of those to be included in the healing, I feel energy sensations move through my body as the healing progresses, and my tool of choice will change in action and strength in its movements.

If I am not included in the healing, I will not experience the energy sensations, but my tool of choice will monitor the changes and stop when the change finishes.

Remember to offer thanks at the completion.

Love to all!

Dowsing, The Magic of Giving and Receiving Blessings

*By Melinda Iverson Inn
Ozark Research Institute – Winter 2023*

Begin with a blessing. Dowsing pre-emptive blessings are always a good idea don't you think? It is such a simple concept and yet many of us forget the power of a blessing.

What is a blessing? Here is my definition; you probably have your own that works for you.

“Thinking kindly and lovingly towards someone or something that will bring about harmony, grace with gratitude, while raising their vibration to a level of love and wholeness.”

Whether it's something you are consuming, or a place you may be visiting, people you may or may not know, your home, a parcel of land, a country, the planet, our celestial friends, your pets, the weather or any aspect of nature. There is always a need for blessings.

What makes a blessing powerful?

Just the very idea that we can through the intention of our hearts, combined with the focus of our mind, send good thoughts towards someone or something, makes us step outside of ourselves and into the realm of the all-encompassing Divine within. Asking for goodness to be bestowed upon a situation, object, something in nature or a person, opens us up to the quantum reality that all things can be in harmony with one another, no matter the circumstances. The very thought of a blessing can purify, cleanse and assist the recipient in so many ways that we cannot fully understand the breadth and width of its reach. We do know blessings work and are quite magical. Blessings can be heard and felt across time and space.

How do we know blessings work?

This question is purely empirical and will depend upon your memories of flow, your being provided for, or synchronicities that have spontaneously happened in your life. I have my personal stories of the many times I have experienced the power of blessings. These have to do with one or many beings coming together to bless and help in my endeavours for raising my consciousness, self-healing, projects and in my life in general. I am learning that my life is a blessing in itself.

Does the power of a blessing depend upon the purity of the heart?

Actually, the act of a blessing helps the heart to come to its natural pure state. The more blessings we send gives us the opportunity to know that we are thinking of others and therefore are acting in service. We can send blessings to ourselves too. In fact, it is highly recommended that we bless ourselves before blessing others.

Why? Because when we ask for a blessing for ourselves first, it provides us the necessary alignment to send blessings to others. It's like the oxygen mask on an aeroplane reference we have all heard so many times.

Blessings are used every day in healing and clearing by many of my friends and colleagues. I find blessings are needed more and more these days, as the energies of our planet are shifting and changing daily.

Blessings can send a beautiful ripple of love and soothing across time-lines, dimensions, spaces, and realities.

Here are some blessings that my friend and colleague Cynthia Sue Larson and I wrote together. Use your pendulum or dowsing rod as an amplifier to radiate and streamline these blessings to your focused intent.

Please feel free to try them out and let me know how they worked for

you. (Melinda@MelindaIversonInn.com)

Lightworkers Blessing

We, Lightworkers of Earth, dedicate ourselves in highest service to God, the Absolute, and the Light today and every day throughout all time, space, dimensions, and realities. We freely choose this for ourselves. (Cynthia Sue Larson & Melinda Iverson Inn)

Gateway Blessing for the Golden Age

Dear God, thank you for blessing me to follow my heart and my highest self, which is connected to You and is my true and faithful guide always. (Cynthia Sue Larson & Melinda Iverson Inn)

Peace and Tranquillity Blessing

I choose to activate the aspects of creation that are empowering and inspiring at the highest levels of sovereignty and spiritual growth for all. (Cynthia Sue Larson & Melinda Iverson Inn) You can also bless yourself and any situation retroactively.

Time Travel Healing of Personal Trauma Blessing

I trust Spirit to guide me through to a point in place and time, bringing the healing presence of genuine love and blessings, repairing lives and relationships for myself and all concerned. – (Cynthia Sue Larson & Melinda Iverson Inn)

Dowsing blessings are a wonderful way to start and end your day. Before sleeping a blessing for dreams, when awakening a blessing to experience the beauty of the day. They can be used to commence a new project, event, send healing and enliven any gathering. Dowsing blessings of joy and healing can be given at any time, just like hugs.

We've got this! All Love and Blessings,

- Melinda

Something to Think About

This was written by an 83 year old woman to her friend.

I'm reading more and dusting less. I'm sitting in the yard and admiring the view without fussing about the weeds in the garden.

I'm spending more time with my family and friends and less time working.

Whenever possible, life should be a pattern of experiences to savour, not to endure. I'm trying to recognize these moments now and cherish them.

I'm not 'saving' anything; we use our good China and crystal for every special event such as losing a pound, getting the sink un-blocked, or the first Amaryllis blossom.

I wear my good blazer to the market. My theory is if I look prosperous, I can shell out $28.49 for one small bag of groceries.

I'm not saving my good perfume for special parties, but wearing it for clerks in the hardware store and tellers at the bank.

"Someday" and "one of these days" are losing their grip on my vocabulary.

If it's worth seeing or hearing or doing, I want to see and hear and do it now.

I'm not sure what others would've done, had they known that they wouldn't be here for the tomorrow that we all take for granted.

I think they would have called family members and a few close friends.

They might have called a few former friends to apologize and mend fences for past squabbles. I like to think they would have gone out for a Chinese dinner, or for whatever their favourite food was.

I'm guessing; I'll never know.

It's those little things left undone that would make me angry if I knew my hours were limited.

Angry because I hadn't written certain letters that I intended to write one of these days.

Angry and sorry that I didn't tell my husband and parents often enough how much I truly love them. I'm trying very hard not to put off, hold back, or save anything that would add laughter and lustre to our lives.

And every morning when I open my eyes, tell myself that it is special.

Every day, every minute, every breath truly is a gift from God.

I don't believe in miracles... I rely on them.

Happy Day to You!

An introduction to The Celtic Stone Method of Adjusting Earth Energies as developed by Peter Ruehmkorff.

Since Peter's death in 2013, Jane has continued doing Environmental Property Surveys. She will explain their method used to change the earth radiation in a home, by suppressing the detrimental 'negative' lines, in order that the 'positive' lines can emerge, usually resulting in a more harmonious and less stressful sleeping and living environment.

In this introductory talk Jane will explain how Peter discovered the Celtic Stone method by trial and error in 1994, outline the way it is done and dowse some river stones for polarities. Jane will discuss checking for detrimental artefacts and ghosts once the stones are placed and the negative energies removed.

People often get sick sleeping on harmful energy lines and they improve after moving their beds. This method (which was discovered after the article was written in 1987) equalises the whole house for family harmony and healing without having to move beds.

Peter's handbook 'Equalisation of Harmful Earth Radiation' will be available in hard copy or e-copy and a hands-on seminar can also be arranged at a later date (max 4 students and the same number of homes) if you want to learn hands-on how to practise this method.

Bring your pendulums and come and enjoy an afternoon expanding your mind.

Book Review:

The Gentle Art of Blessing

By Pierre Pradervand

A simple practice that will transform you and your world.

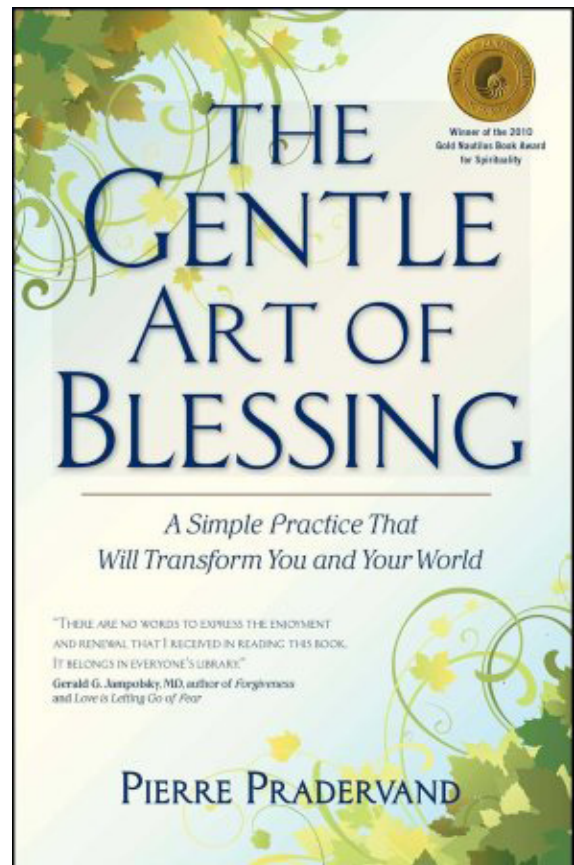

How can a blessing change the world? According to Pierre Pradervand, making the conscious choice to bless every person or being around you, can truly make a world of difference in yourself and in others around you.

In The Gentle Art of Blessing, Pradervand shows that the practice of blessing has the power to create more than just a renewed perspective.

It unleashes tangible benefits throughout your entire life - through your daily interactions, your life-long relationships, and in the way your approach your place in the world.
